

more to change the character and the structure of this government than all of his predecessors combined. He has frequently exhibited a supreme indifference to the Constitution of his country, and has pursued what has seemed to me a deliberate plan to impair the rights of the States and to concentrate all power in the Federal government.

"It was the boast of Augustus Caesar that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble. President Roosevelt can hereafter say that he found this a union of sovereign States, and left it one vast nation. The good he has done in arousing public attention to certain evils of corporate management will give him an enviable place in the history of his time, but the harm he has done in dividing the States and exalting the general government cannot be measured, and unless the tendency which he has set in motion is arrested and reversed, our splendid Federal system will ultimately be destroyed.

"We have never before witnessed such a mixture of good and evil in any public man.

"Before we have finished praising him for some wise recommendation he makes another so foolish that our praises must turn to censures. They tell me that he is brave, and I answer that he is just as rash as he is brave. They tell me that he is honest, and I answer that he is just as arbitrary as he is honest.

"You had for a blessing, I wish in my heart.

"He were better or worse."

If he were much better, he declared, he would be a Democrat, and if he were a little worse he would not observe and confuse the great issues between the Democrats and their adversaries.

"But," he added, "conceding that the President's attitude toward the corporations has affected the value of their securities, the would not observe the holders of these securities who had borrowed on them beyond a safe margin, and it would not disprove my assertion that the real cause of the trouble was the overuse of bank credits in the city of New York."

ADOPT WILLIAMS BILL

Minority Agree to Report It As Substitute for the Fowler Act.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The Democratic members of the House Committee on Banking and Currency to-day agreed to report the minority currency bill, introduced by John Sharp Williams as a substitute for the Fowler bill.

In the course of their report the minority say:

"We oppose the bill because it virtually takes from the government all power to regulate and safeguard the national banks of the country, and wholly gives over the control of such institutions to a board of managers which is selected by the banks themselves."

The minority also takes exception to the provisions of the bill requiring the retirement of all state banknotes and claims that it makes banks the agents of the government for the transaction of all its business, and urges the inadequacy of the interest charge. It is also charged that under the operation of the proposed law all state banks and savings and trust companies would inevitably be driven out of business.

"With the banks all organized under one system, enjoying sole and complete power to issue all moneys as they deem proper, will there not be great danger either from contraction or inflation of the amount of money in circulation?" they ask. "Will it not be in the absolute power of these banks, or their board of managers, to make money scarce or to make it plentiful; to make the rate of interest high or make it cheap; to cause a depression, or to produce a relaxation? Surely Congress is being asked to delegate to the banks a most dangerous and wonderful power in giving them absolute control of the medium of all values—money—and in conferring on them sole power to issue money in such quantities as they think wise. The minority members of the committee say emphatically that this country is not ready to delegate such dangerous power. We may well doubt the most serious proposition with which Congress has had to deal in many years is the regulation and control of the great corporations that have grown over-powerful and beyond the control of the government. Yet, walls we are planning to give money-making power and justly subject these great interests to government regulation, we are asked by the Fowler bill to create a banking system all-powerful, with complete and undisputed authority to issue the circulating medium of our country, in quantity, in manner, and at times to please, those fortunate enough to enjoy this great special privilege."

The minority conclude by urging the acceptance of the Williams bill as a substitute for the Fowler bill. Of the Williams bill they say in part:

"The minority members of the committee commend the bill herewith presented as being practical, conservative and safe, and believe it comes nearer to adjusting the financial situation than any other measure submitted."

WILL VOTE THIS WEEK

Senator Aldrich Expects His Measure to be Passed Upon This Week.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Senator Aldrich will endeavor to get his currency bill on Friday or Saturday. The last speech to be made in the Senate in opposition to the bill, according to the present understanding, will be on Thursday, when Senator La Follette is to speak.

Senator McPherson, of Arkansas, will address the Senate to-morrow and Wednesday, respectively. There are so many amendments pending that it is likely two days will be required to reach the final vote after debate has closed, Senator Aldrich will speak for the bill, and the debate will close, also will Senator Hale.

REAR-ADMIRAL WHITE'S SHOE

MAY CARRY NINTH, SAYS GEN. AYERS

Democratic Success in the Southwest Not Hopeless by Any Means, He Says.

Times-Dispatch Bureau, Munsey Building, Washington, D. C., March 9. Former Attorney-General Rufus A. Ayers, of Big Stone Gap, was at the Capitol to-day, on his way to Wilmington, Del., on legal business. "The General," as his acquaintances have always termed him since he served as Attorney-General of the State from 1855 to 1859, entertained several of the Virginia members with his views on politics, State and national.

"I have voted for Mr. Bryan twice," said General Ayers. "It looks certain that I am to have the opportunity of voting for him again. I will not say what I shall do. I have the greatest admiration for Mr. Bryan's intellect and his personal character. But he is a theorist. He has never demonstrated that he has the capacity to rule this country from the White House. I have heard him discuss public questions, and before he had been talking ten minutes I felt myself under the spell of his eloquence. But when I had come away and had time to think over what I had heard him say I realized the impracticability of much of it."

The Ninth Not "Hopeless." General Ayers does not take the usual view of Democrats outside of the Ninth District, that the district is "hopelessly Republican," to use the customary expression.

"The Ninth District will elect a Democrat to Congress when the proper nomination is made," he said. "Good men have lost the district, of course, but I believe there are men in the Democratic party in the Ninth District who can carry it."

General Ayers has heard it rumored that Representative Bascom Slomp will not stand for the nomination this year, but he does not attempt to confirm the report. Mr. Slomp does not hesitate to say that the life of a member of Congress is not entirely to his liking. There are many aspirants for the Republican nomination, and the probability that the fight among these will become very bitter makes the re-nomination of Mr. Slomp rather likely.

Southern Claims in Danger

It is feared that the Senate is "overdoing it" in the matter of providing for the payment of claims of Southern people, especially schools and colleges, damaged by Federal troops. The omnibus claims bill which passed the House this session, carried a total of about $300,000 for the payment of claims of the Southern States. The Senate Committee on Claims has already put on enough additional claims to increase the total to about $2,000,000. There is no doubt that the House will pass the bill through the Senate, but it is very much doubted whether the House conferees will accept the amendments, in which case there would be no claims legislation at this session.

Home for Southern Societies

The various Southern societies of Washington, including the United Confederate Veterans, the Sons of Confederate Veterans, the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and the Southern Relief Society, have purchased the old Normant residence on M Street N. W., between Ninth and Tenth, and will convert it into a home for the organizations named. The new building, a Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, is arranging to hold a great bazaar soon, the proceeds to be devoted to converting the old residence, which has been a very handsome one, into rooms suited to the needs of the organizations which will occupy it. The building was purchased at a cost of about $20,000.

ARMOR BELT IS PUT TOO LOW

This View Expressed by Rear-Admirals Remy and Goodrich and Lieutenant White.

DEFENDS AMERICAN SHIPS

Secretary Metcalf Says They Are Superior to Those of Any Other Navy in the World.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Testimony was given to-day before the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs, which is investigating the criticisms of battleship construction, showing that the location of the armor belt of American battleships was too low. On the other hand, a letter from Secretary Metcalf, dated March 7, to the opinion of the Board of Construction and Rear-Admirals Evans and Brownson that the armor belt lines of the battleships Delaware and North Dakota were right. The secretary, in his communication, took occasion to declare that American battleships were superior to those of any other navy.

The witnesses to-day were Lieutenant Richard D. White, assistant inspector of target practice, and Rear-Admiral George C. Remy, and Commander Goodrich, Lieutenant White was the first to take the stand. In reference to the location of the armor belt, he said that if it were possible for a ship to get into action at the designed draft, the present location would be about right, but it was his observation that the ships had greater drafts than those designated. He thought the drafts would be still greater under war conditions.

His opinion was the same as that of Commander Sims, who is the inspector of target practice. Concerning the construction of turrets, he said that safety demands that the turret proper shall be structurally separated from the ammunition handling room. The two-stage hoist is one way to effect this, but he thought it might be possible to construct a direct hoist, so that the handling room could be isolated. He preferred the two-stage hoist, and declared that the shutter now in use in the direct hoist is "most inefficient." Describing the shutter, he said it was so constructed that grains of powder could easily get through the slit for the life rope in the event of an accident overhead.

Letter from Secretary.

Chairman Hale read a letter from Secretary Metcalf stating that after the plans for the battleships Delaware and North Dakota had been approved, the Rear-Admiral (Lieutenant Commander Hill) had recommended that the armor belt should be raised thirty inches. The department referred this criticism to the board on construction, and the original designs were declared to be right. The officer made rejoinder, and Admiral Brownson then referred to Rear-Admiral Brownson and Evans, who also declared that the belt was correctly located.

Secretary Metcalf called attention to the fact that the Delaware and North Dakota are to be equipped with the two-stage hoists, and "there is no ground for the contention as to the location of the armor belt," answering general criticisms, Secretary Metcalf said:

The Two Admirals.

Rear-Admiral George C. Remy, retired, told the committee he would locate the armor belt with reference to the proper load water line, when the ship is equipped to go into battle. He thought it the duty of a commander of a battleship to have full stores on board, and in going into battle, he should be equipped to go into battle. He said he never had believed in the open turret and thought the guns should be completely isolated from the ammunition handling rooms. He said he had no hesitation in endorsing the interrupted hoist. He opposed the direct hoist for rapidity of fire.

Rear-Admiral C. Goodrich, commandant of the New York navy yard, who said in an interview after the publication of the Reuter article that he had called attention years before to such defects as were alleged by Reuter, asserted that he believed the American ships to be good, and that they could be made better. He was asked by Mr. Hale if he would subscribe to Reuter's statement that if our ships went into action they would be no better off than the Russian ships when they met the Japanese.

"Oh, no," he replied positively.

In regard to the location of the armor belt, he said he concurred absolutely in the testimony of Admiral Remy. Later the witness said he thought the interrupted hoist better than the direct type. He was asked about the German navy in "attacking" to the eleven-inch gun. The admiral said the twelve-inch gun was better than the eleven, and the thirteen-inch better than the twelve-inch. Senator Tillman called his attention to the fact that the German navy had adopted the twelve-inch gun, and he said that he would corroborate him in the declaration that the department would not accept officers' criticisms.

MAKE LAW ON EXTORTION APPLY TO ALL AGENTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—The Senate Committee on Judiciary to-day ordered reported a bill extending to all agents and employees of the government, or persons pretending to be such, penalties and penalties by law for "officers' guilty of extortion."

MINORITY STILL BACKING OF SLATE

Statement Given Out Setting Forth How the Alleged Combine Was Framed Up.

BATTLE IS APPARENTLY OVER

Local Republicans All for Taft, but Each Side Wants Recognition.

Notwithstanding the fact that the turbulent Republican mass-meeting here Saturday night ended in apparent harmony among the white contingent, Mr. George A. Ransom, the leader of the kicking faction, making a speech in which he stated that he bowed cheerfully to the will of the majority, there are evidently some bickerings left, which may take much time to dispel. And yet the victory of the dominant faction was so complete that it is hard to conceive how anything is to be gained by the minority through a further prosecution of the war.

Delegates to the State and district conventions were elected, a new city committee chosen, and all this was done with the minority present and voting. No contesting delegations are said to be in contemplation for either convention, and smooth sailing is anticipated in Manchester on March 19th, when a candidate for Congress will be named. Sifted down, it looks as if it were to a certain extent the old fight of the "outs" against the "ins," though the latter faction was apparently well backed in Saturday night's meeting by nonoffice holders.

All the white Republicans here appear to be for Judge Taft for President, and the criterion of election has arisen over who shall be allowed to get into the forefront and do the shouting for him.

In following up the contentions of the minority in the mass-meeting, one of that faction gave out the following yesterday:

"The combination to which Mr. Hanson referred in Saturday night's meeting was not a cut-and-dried plan, or slate, looking to the running of that particular meeting, but it was something much more far-reaching and important than that. It was that Messrs. M. J. Enright and J. G. Luce, the former having been especially the spokesman of the Taft forces in this district, and Messrs. Edgar Allan, M. M. Williams and R. E. Cabell, who had been leading the opposition, but had now apparently surrendered to the Taft people, together with Mr. C. Ridgeway Moore, had gotten together in advance of the meeting of an county or city convention, and among themselves entered into a secret written combine, whereby they, and not the convention, were to be named by the speakers to the entire business, and divide up all the honors among themselves, which written agreement was in substance as follows:

"1. Enright was to go as a delegate to the national convention.
"2. Luce was to be run as the candidate for Congress.
"3. Allan, Williams, Cabell and Ridgeway Moore were to name the other delegates to the national convention.
"4. The five members of the State Committee, and the electors for the district were to be named by the same combine, so that the electors and members of the State Committee should be given to one side, and the other side to take the remaining members of the State Committee."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Address Delivered Before Large Audience at Academy of Music Last Night—Many Children There and All Interested.

Almost filling the lower floor, and with a good number in the galleries of the Academy of Music, an enthusiastic audience listened last night to a lecture on Christian Science, delivered by Mr. Bicknell Young, C. S. B., of Chicago, a member of the board of lecturers of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston.

Many of the representative people of the city were present and followed the lecture with marked attention. It was a notable fact that among the large crowd were quite a number of children, from twelve years old and upward, whose attention seemed to be riveted on the speaker as that of their elders.

Mr. Young's speech was perhaps the most lucid and interesting discussion of Christian Science ever heard in this city.

Recognizing that the world has not generally entertained any scientific view of religion, the speaker dwelt upon this point, answering objections that have been raised in relation to it. He said:

"Religion and science both refer to absolute truth, and are not inherently antagonistic, as many people believe. Jesus, the founder of the Christian religion, demonstrated this fact, for He taught and illustrated in His words an exact, unflinching knowledge of God, which is in its very essence scientific. His method, admittedly Christian, must be acknowledged as a pure scientific one, any one who cares to look the matter squarely in the face. Christian Science, therefore, is a name which, given to this method, designates it accurately and satisfactorily. Although science has not been generally associated with prayer, yet the way is always of prayer, whereby man's unity with God is declared and proven in the degree of one's understanding."

"In Christian Science, many seemingly contradictory statements of the Bible are reconciled as the spiritual import of them is more clearly discerned. 'Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures,' by Mary Baker G. Eddy, is a commentary on the Bible, and even more than a commentary, for it gives the student the principles and rules of the science which the Bible indicates. The world has longed for a solution of the problems of human existence. Their solution has generally been deemed impossible, and it has been thought that all the questions which have troubled the human heart could only be answered by dying and going to some place which was supposed to be heaven. Christian Science declares that the truth about heaven is disclosed in the words of Jesus, 'The kingdom of God is within you.' It is a science which the Bible indicates.
